

Distribution boxes are subject to tax

Overview

These boxes on the 1099-R play key roles in determining taxability: Box 2a lists the taxable portion of your distribution, but this can change once you give us more info. If you see a 0 (zero), then none of it's taxable. If the box is blank (empty), the taxable amount needs to be. Beginning with distributions made after December 31, 2023, a distribution to a domestic abuse victim is not subject to the 10% additional tax on early distributions if the distribution meets certain requirements. For more information, see Distributions to victims of domestic abuse, later. Most distributions from businesses, investments, and retirement plans do get taxed as ordinary income, though the real story is more complex. The Internal Revenue Code Section 301 governs corporate distributions, and whether your money is taxed as ordinary income, capital gains, or not taxed at all. A taxable distribution is any payout from a retirement account, investment fund, annuity, trust, or similar source that the IRS counts as income on your federal return. Form 1099-R, Box 7 Code 2 or Code 7, if the IRA/SEP/SIMPLE box is checked and additional reporting.
